This story is sponsored by Crew.

Most parents start early to teach their children values like kindness, sharing, faith and cleanliness. Often these same parents neglect to teach their children anything about money and finances.

In an article for PBS News, Beth Koblinner wrote that children need to learn about money at an early age.

"Start talking about money values," she writes. "The same way you'd teach your kid to tell the truth or be kind to others, make sure they know what matters to your family when it comes to money."

Lehi-based Crew offers a free family banking app designed to empower parents and kids alike. Crew helps parents manage their finances while giving kids the tools to become money-smart. With Crew's intuitive platform, your family can teach kids how to save, budget and plan for the future — all while enjoying a high-yield savings account with zero hidden fees.

If you're ready for a free, all-in-one solution to help your kids develop good money habits, this is your sign to make the jump. Sign up for Crew today and get started on the path to raising money-savvy kids.

Question 1 of 7

1. Do you give your child an allowance?

Yes, regularly.

Sometimes, but not consistently.

No.

By participating, you not only get a chance to support your local adoption organizations but also help these adorable animals find a loving family.

- HOW IT WORKS:
1. Meet our adorable contestants - all currently up for adoption.
 2. Vote for your favorite adoptable pets up to once per hour. Last day to vote is May 27th.
 3. Share with friends and family to boost their chances (and adoptions!).

The 5 winners with the most votes will receive treat baskets compliments of Hadley's Haven, the Humane Society of North Central Arkansas and the Baxter Bulletin. Plus, their adoption journey will receive extra exposure in the Baxter Bulletin.
